SLOW EUTHANASIA: CDC pushing more COVID “booster” shots on people 65 and older: “every four months”

There is another new Wuhan coronavirus (COVID-19) "vaccine" they are calling a "booster," 2023-2024 edition, that the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) wants all seniors over the age of 65 to get this year.

The CDC's Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices (ACIP) panel says older adults need immediate protection from "the increased risk of severe disease from COVID-19," and that they can achieve this by getting jabbed with the latest chemical shots from the pharmaceutical industry.

In a February 28 press release, the CDC says its new recommendation is based on "the currently available data on vaccine effectiveness," which allegedly points to the newest boosters providing solid protection for the elderly against the latest Chinese Virus strains.

"Adults 65 years and older are disproportionately impacted by COVID-19, with more than half of COVID-19 hospitalizations during October 2023 to December 2023 occurring in this age group," the CDC claims.

"Data continues to show the importance of vaccination to protect those most at risk for severe outcomes of COVID-19. An additional dose of the updated COVID-19 vaccine may restore protection that has waned since a fall vaccine dose, providing increased protection to adults ages 65 years and older."

(Related: No matter how much you've been injured by COVID jabs, the CDC still wants you to keep getting jabbed with every new "booster.")

CDC fearmongering yet again

Some members of the CDC advisory panel were unhappy with the initial recommendation, not because it went too far and is based on pseudoscience but rather because, in their opinion, it did not go far enough in scaring old people to take the latest booster.

The first proposed guidance was merely a recommendation that elderly folks may want to get the newest boosters. Some CDC panel members argued that the recommendation needed stronger language instructing people 65 and older that they should get the latest boosters, otherwise they might get sick and die.

In the end, the panel voted 11-1 to use stronger, scarier-sounding wording after CDC Director Dr. Mandy Cohen decided it sounded best, arguing that it would light a fire under the feet of old people to better scare them into taking the new injections, no questions asked.

"Most COVID-19 deaths and hospitalizations last year were among people 65 years and older," Cohen claimed about why she supported the stronger recommendation. "An additional vaccine dose can provide added protection that may have decreased over time for those at highest risk."

What Cohen conveniently failed to bring up is a new study out of Japan that warns about the dangers of the newest boosters. That study determined that there is insufficient evidence to back pushing these new shots on older adults.

"The real driver behind all this decision making is generating and following the money," wrote one skeptical commenter about why the CDC continues to lie to the public about the deadly shots.

"If you can't earn it, then get yourself into a niche where you can make it legal to steal it from those who do earn it while eliminating the rest. That's where we're at now."

"Actually, this is also about population control," responded another. "The CDC is guilty of crimes against humanity. I wonder if anyone will ever do something about it ... I seriously doubt it."

"They don't even care anymore that we know they're trying to kill us," said another. "I guess they didn't reach their elderly death goal the first time around, so now they're pushing yet another round of these poison shots."

The CDC will never stop pushing chemical injections on Americans, no matter how dangerous they are. Find out more at CDC.news.
